The Advocate.

Rev. J. Wiley Bledsoe, of the special committee on the church organ, the Advocate submitted its report. The committee report that the Baltimore Conference refused to continue the relation to the Advocate it had formally sustained. The committee further report that R.v. James Cannon and Rev. J. Sidney Peters had purchased 188 of the 200 shares of Advocate stock, and that the paper had Advocate stock, and that the paper had been very much improved and its circula-tion increased. The new owners offers to sell their stock to the Conference at what it cost. On this point the commit-tee made no recommendation.

The First Division.

The First discussion and division of the Conference arose over the disposition of the report. The Bishop inclined to the view that the r-port should go to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

Rev. Dr. Lipscomb, a member of the special committee, took issue with this view, contending that this was the report of a duly constituted special comport of a duly constituted special committee and was not properly referable to the Committee on Publishing Inter-

Dr. Whitehead thought the report ought to go to the Committee on Publishing Interests.

Rev. J. H. Amiss brought the question to an issue by moving its reference to the standing committee.

The question was put viva voce, but the chair was unable to decide and a division was had, with the result that the opponents of reference prevailed and the report was thus before the Conference for its action.

The chief recommendation of the retwo ministers and one layman—to confer with the publishers with reference to the conduct of the paper.

Rev. Mr. Amiss proposed that the report be taken up by sections and thus acted upon. He criticised the vagueness of the language and asked to know what the word "confer" meant. He spoke at some length in opposition to the report of the special committee in its present form.

Rev. Dr. W. E. Judkins attacked the Rev. Dr. W. E. Judkins attacked the recommendation as to an advisory committee, contending that the Conterence had no right to dictate the policy of the Advocate, which was personal property of the owners. It would be an assumption to attempt to control the policy or utterances of the paper.

Rev. T. J. Wray spoke vigorously along the same line, contending that the Conference had neither legal nor moral right to dictate the policy or control its action further than it might do by withdrawing or extending its endorsement and patronage. The speaker was opposed to the Conference owning its organ and advocated the continuance of the old policy of having the paper run by its owners and publishers.

of having the paper run by its owners and publishers.

Rev. J. Wiley Biedsoe and Rev. B. F. Lipscomb, of the committee, spoke vigorously in advocacy of the advisory committee, recommending, contending that there was nothing unusual in the proposition. If the paper did not commend itself to the Conference, the body could communicate with the publishers through its advisory committee at any time. They emphasized the fact that the committee was to be merely advisory and not managerial.

The Owner's Statement.

The Owner's Statement.

The Owner's Statement.

The conference seemed to be drifting unerringly toward a rock upon which the body has divided several times in former years, but at this point, Rev. James Cannon, Jr., one of the owners, arose and made a clear statement that steered clear of the rocks. He made it clear that he and his associate came before the body with an alternative proposition; that the conference buy the courrel of the paper at what it cost the owners; or that the body let the owners conduct the paper ference that the owners of the Advocato had no objection to the Advisory Committee. He frankly stated that it was the desire of the owners to so conduct the paper as to command the approval of the conference, but that if the Advisory Committee made a recommendation the owners could not accept, it would be so reported to the conference.

Rev. W. A. Christian offered an amendment perfecting the phraseology of the committee recommendation, simply providing that the Advisory Committee cease its functions whenever the Conference may withdraw its patronage. This amendment was suggested.

Rev. W. V. Tudor, D. D., objected to the recommendation, which he regarded as premature, and liable to conflict with the report of the Committee on Publishing Interests. He contended that this standing committee should be officially informed of the action of the Executive Committee.

Dr. Tudor's contention did not find favor with the conference.

Rev. R. T. Wilson moved the adoption of the report of the special committee, as amended. The motion prevailed, with the result that the Advocate was endorsed as the conference organ, and that an advisory committee of three be named as provided, to confer with the publishers. The Committee on Publishing Interests will nominate the committee.

Conference Requests.

Rev. Dr. Lipscomb officially informed the conference of the decision of the court of Lynchburg by which the conference is bequeathed the sum of £2,000 for missions—$1,000 for foreign and $1,000 for domestic, the same having been bequeathed in the will of George M. Jones. The matter was referred to the Board of Missions for decision as to the application of the fund.

The Conference then got down to work with the details, and the character of many ministers was passed. Bishop Wilson, in order to expedite matter, dispensed with the usual detail of reports from the preachers. Their names were called and reports were made by the several presiding elders. As a result of this expeditions measure the entire list of the ministers in full convention was called and the characters and official administrations of all were approved.

When Rev. B. F. Lipscomb, D. D., presiding elder of the Petersburg District, had testified to the characters of all the other ministers under his jurisdiction, he Instantly the buzz of conversation ceased and a tense silence and attitude of expectancy followed. "I have had two conferences with him, one in October and the other November 6th," said Dr. Lipscomb, which I will deliver to the secretary to be read to the Conference,

The first letter from Mr. Hope announced his intention to withdraw from the Conference and to surrender his credentials as an elder, but announced that he had been unable to find his dea-con's credentials, but that in turning in one, he surrendered both. by the presiding bishop: "If a man sur-render his credentials as a minister what render his credentials as a minister what is his status with regard to church membership?" The Bishop replied that surrender of ministerial credentials did not operate as a surrender of church membership, unless expressly stated or ask-bership, unless expressly stated or asked.

Dr. Lipscomb then asked of what church was Mr. Hope a member. No one seemed to know, but Bishop Wilson stated that he was a member of the church and of the quartely conference to which he was last accredited.

The list of pastors was called to the end and the character was passed. The case of Rev. R. B. Beadles, of Asbury, Manchester, was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations. He will ask for a superannuate relation, owing to his own age and his wife's feeble health.

The case of Rev. R. B. Bentley was re

Conference Notes.

Bishop Wilson rather peremptorily ordered a number of young preachers who were blocking the aisle to clear, it and let others pass. The response was a scamper to cover, and the congestion was soon relieved. Several times during the day's session the bishop had to insist upon a cessation of the buzz and hum of conversation. The presiding elders, officials and reporters were about all who could hear during the transaction of routine work. The church was crowded, the gallerles being filled with ladles, many of whom kept up a lively conversation. Frequently the gavel was resorted to during the passage of the character of ministers.

Rev. J. Powell Garland. D. D., who was detained from yesterday's session by roason of illness, was well enough to be present to-day, and was warmly greeted by his brethren.

The fervent "Amens" from the same quarter th's morning announced that Rev. John Hannon, D. D., had arrived on the scene and was following the procedure. The doctor is a favorite in Lynchburg, where he formerly held a pastorate. The memorial services, at which tributes to deceased ministers will be read, will be held on Saturday evening at Centenary Church.
